

RLIF MEMBERSHIP POLICY

OCTOBER 2014

According to the Constitution of the Rugby League International Federation (RLIF) there are two categories of Membership: Full and Affiliate. In addition to these categories the RLIF also ranks Observers, as an entry level category.

A Member of the RLIF is the organisation recognised by the Rugby League International Federation (RLIF) as the body responsible for the regulation and / or control of the game of rugby league in that country. There may only be one National Governing Body (NGB). An Observer is recognised by the RLIF as the organisation preparing to adopt that responsibility.

A recognised country will need to demonstrate the following criteria:

- The country is a territory distinguished by its people, culture and geography.
- The country will be able to demonstrate that it has its own flag and government and that it has complete autonomy over sport within its defined area.
- The country is recognised by the United Nations (UN) or is recognized as a country within a country which is a member of the UN.
- The Board of the RLIF is satisfied that the applicant will be of benefit to the RLIF and its Membership

OBSERVER

The Board of the RLIF may at its discretion admit a country to Observer status based upon a completed application which will include the following:

1. Constitution correctly signed and approved.
2. Bank Account with at least two dual-signatories drawn from the Board of the applicant.
3. A list of the interested parties together with contact details, position within the organisation and a brief biography of the Board Members.
4. A not for profit legal entity established in the country of the applicant organisation.

5. Provision of founding minutes that clearly define founding members, in line with the constitution, and governing Board elections.
6. A Development Plan for the following 12 month period.

AFFILIATE MEMBER

1. An organisation applying for Affiliate Membership must meet all Observer criteria.
